

SUR

When graceful sorrow in her pomp appears,
 Sure she is dress'd in Meleinda's tears;
 Your head reclin'd, as hiding grief from view;
 Droops like a rose surcharg'd with morning dew. Dryden.
SURCHARGER. n. f. [from surcharge.] One that overburthens.
SURCINGLES. n. f. [from sur and cingulum, Latin.]
 1. A girth with which the burthen is bound upon a horse.
 2. The girdle of a cassolet.
 Justly he chose the surcingle and gown. Marvell.
SURCULE. n. f. [from surculus, Latin.] A shoot; a twig; a sucker.
 Not in general use.
 It is an arborescent excrecence, or superplant, which the tree cannot assimilate, and therefore sprouteth not forth in boughs and surcles of the same shape unto the tree. Brown.
 The basilica dividing into two branches below the cubic,
 the outward sendeth two surcles unto the thumb. Brown.
SURCOAT. n. f. [from surcoat, old French; sur and coat.] A short coat worn over the rest of the dress.
 The honourable habiliments, as robes of state, parliament-robes, the surcoat, and mantle. Camden.
 The commons were befrosted in excess of apparel, in wide surcoats reaching to their loins. Camden.
 That day in equal arms they fought for fame;
 Their swords, their shields, their surcoats were the fame. Dry.
SURD. adj. [from surdus, Latin.]
 1. Deaf; wanting the sense of hearing.
 2. Unheard; not perceived by the ear.
 3. Not expressed by any term.
SURE. adj. [from sure, French.]
 1. Certain; unshaking; infallible.
 The testimony of the Lord is sure, and giveth wisdom unto the simple. Psalms xix. 7.
 Who knows,
 Let this be good, whether our angry foe
 Can give it, or will ever? How he can,
 Is doubtful; that he never will, is sure. Milt. Parad. Lost.
 2. Certainly doomed.
 Our coin beyond sea is valued according to the silver in it:
 sending it in bullion is the safest way, and the weightiest is sure to go. Locke.
 3. Confident; undoubting; certainly knowing.
 Friar Laurence met them both;
 Him he knew well, and guess'd that it was she;
 But, being madd'd, he was not sure of it. Shakespeare.
 Let no man seek what may befall;
 Evil he may be sure. Milton.
 The youngest in the morning are not sure
 That 'till the night their life they can secure. Denham.
 While fore of battle, while our wounds are green,
 Why would we tempt the doubtful dye agen?
 In wars renew'd, uncertain of success,
Sure of a share, as umpires of the peace. Dryden.
 If you find nothing new in the matter, I am sure much less will you in the file. Waller.
 Be silent always, when you doubt your sense;
 And speak, though sure, with seeming diffidence. Pope.
 4. Safe; firm; certain; past doubt or danger.
 Thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule. Dan. ix. 26.
 He had me make sure of the bear, before I fell his skin. P. E. L.
 They would make others on both sides sure of pleasing, in preference to instruction. Dryden's Dunciad.
 They have a nearer and surer way to the felicity of life, by tempering their passions, and reducing their appetites. Temple.
 A peace cannot fail us, provided we make sure of Spain.
 Revenge is now my joy; he's not for me,
 And I'll make sure he ne'er shall be for thee. Dryden.
 I bred you up to arms, rais'd you to power,
 All to make sure the vengeance of this day,
 Which even this day has ruin'd. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
 Make Cato sure, and give up Ulica,
 Cæsar will ne'er refuse thee such a trifle. Addison's Cato.
 They have reason to make all actions worthy of observation, which are sure to be observed. Atterbury.
 5. Firm; stable; not liable to failure.
 Thou the garden wear'st more sure than I could do,
 Thou art not firm enough. Shakespeare's Henry IV.
 I wish your horns swift and sure of foot,
 And so I do commend you to their backs. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
 Virtue, dear friends, needs no defence;
 The surest guard is innocence. Roscommon.
 Partition firm and sure the waters to divide. Milton.
 Doubting thus of innate principles, men will call pulling up the old foundations of knowledge and certainty: I persuade myself that the way I have pursued, being conformable to truth, lays those foundations sure. Locke.
 To prove a genuine birth,
 On female truth attending faith relies:
 Thus manifest of right, I build my claim,
Sure founded on a fair maternal face. Pope's Odyssey.

SUR

6. To be SURE. Certainly. This is a vitious expression: more properly be sure.
 Objects of sense would then determine the views of all such,
 to be sure, who conversed perpetually with them. Atterbury.
 Though the chymist could not calcine the caput mortuum, to obtain its fixed salt, to be sure it must have some. Arbutnot.
SURE. adv. [from sur, French.] Certainly; without doubt;
 doubtless. It is generally without emphasis; and, notwithstanding its original meaning, expresses rather doubt than assertion.
 Something, sure, of state but not of mind.
 Hath puddled his clear spirit. Shakespeare.
 Her looks were flush'd, and fullen was her mien,
 That sure the virgin goddess, had she been Aught but a virgin, must the guilt have seen. Addison.
SURE the queen would with him still unknown:
 She loaths, detests him, flies his hated presence. Smith.
SURE, upon the whole, a bad author deserves better usage than a bad critic.
SUREFOOTED. adj. [from sure and foot.] Treading firmly; not stumbling.
 True earnest sorrows, rooted miseries,
 Anguish in grain, vexations ripe and blown,
Surfaced griefs, solid calamities. Herbert.
SURELY. adv. [from sure.]
 1. Certainly; undoubtedly; without doubt. It is often used rather to intend and strengthen the meaning of the sentence, than with any distinct and explicable meaning.
 In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die. Gen.
 Thou surely hadst not come sole fugitive.
 He that created something out of nothing, surely can raise great things out of small.
 The curious have thought the most minute affairs of Rome worth notice; and surely the consideration of their wealth is at least of as great importance as grammatical criticisms. Art.
 2. Firmly; without hazard.
 He that walketh righteously, walketh surely.
SURENESS. n. f. [from sure.] Certainty.
 He diverted himself with the speculation of the seed of coral, and for more sureness he repeats it. Woodward.
SURETY. n. f. [from surety.] The office of a surety or bondsmen; the act of being bound for another.
 Hath not the greatest daughter of armies been effected by stratagem? And have not the fairest estates been destroyed by suretyship?
 Idly, like prisoners, which whole months will swear
 That only suretyship hath brought them there. Dana.
 If here not clear'd, no suretyship can bail
 Condemned debtors from th' eternal goal. Daphnia.
SURETY. n. f. [from surety, French.]
 1. Certainty; indubitableness.
 There the princess determining to bathe, thought it was so privileged a place as no body durst presume to come thither;
 yet, for the more surety, they looked round about. Shakespeare.
 Know of a surety that thy feed shall be a stranger. Gen. xv.
 2. Foundation of stability; support.
 We our state
 Hold, as you your's, while our obedience holds;
 On other surety none. Milton.
 3. Evidence; ratification; confirmation.
 She call'd the faints to surety,
 That she would never put it from her finger,
 Unless she gave it to yourself. Shakespeare.
 4. Security against loss or damage; security for payment.
 There remains unpaid
 A hundred thousand more, in surety of the which One part of Aquitain is bound to us. Shakespeare.
 5. Hostage; bondsmen; one that gives security for another;
 one that is bound for another.
 That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,
 One of the greatest in the Christian world
 Shall be my surety. Shakespeare's All's well that ends well.
 I will be surety for him; of my hand shalt thou require him. Gen. xliii. 9.
 Yet be not surety, if thou be a father;
 Love is a personal debt: I cannot give it.
 My children's rights, nor ought he take it. Elphinstone.
 All, in infancy, are by others presented with the desires of the parents, and intercession of sureties, that they may be early admitted by baptism into the school of Christ. Hannam.
SURFACE. n. f. [from sur and face, French.] Superficies; outside;
 superice. It is accented by Milton on the last syllable.
 Which of us who beholds the bright surface
 Of this ethereal mold, whereon we stand,
 All their surfaces shall be truly plain, or truly spherical, and look all the same way, so as together to compose one even surface. Newton's Opt.
 Errors like straws upon the surface flow.
 He who would search for pearls must dive below. Dryden.
 To SURFACE. v. a. [from sur and face, French.] To do more than enough, to exceed. To feed with meat or drink to satiety and sickness; to cram overmuch. Milton.

SUR

The surfeited grooms
 Do mock their charge with snores. Shakespeare.
 To SURFEIT. v. n. To be fed to satiety and sickness.
 The commonwealth is sick of their own choice.
 Their over-greedy love hath surfeited. Shakespeare's Henry IV.
 They are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing. Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.
 Take heed lest your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness. Luke xxi. 34.
 Though some had so surfeited in the vineyards, and with the wines, that they had been left behind, the generosity of the Spaniards sent them all home. Clarendon.
 They must be let loose to the childish play they fancy, which they should be weaned from, by being made to surfeit of
 it. Locke.
SURFEIT. n. f. [from the verb.] Sickness or satiety caused by overfulness.
 When we are sick in fortune, often the surfeits of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon and stars. Shakespeare's King Lear.
 How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!
 I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
 So surfeit swell'd, so oily, and so profane. Shakespeare's H. IV.
 Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;
 Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him. Shakespeare's R. II.
 Thou'lt years upon thee, and thou art too fall
 Of the wars surfeits to go rove with one That's yet unbruised. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
 Why, disease, do'st thou molest
 Ladies, and of them the best?
 Do not men grow sick of rites,
 To thy altars, by their nights Spent in surfeits? Ben. Jonson.
Surfeits many times turn to purges, both upwards and downwards. Bacon's Natural History.
 Peace, which he lov'd in life, did lend
 Her hand to bring him to his end;
 When age and death call'd for the score,
 No surfeits were to reckon for. Crashaw.
 Our father
 Has ta'en himself a surfeit of the world,
 And cries, it is not safe that we should taste it. Ottaway.
SURFEITER. n. f. [from surfeit.] One who riots; a glutton.
 I did not think
 This am'rous surfeiter would have don'd his helm
 For such a petty war. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleopatra.
SURFEITWATER. n. f. [from surfeit and water.] Water that cures surfeits.
 A little cold-distill'd poppywater, which is the true surfeit- water, with ease and abstinence, often ends distempers in the beginning. Locke.
SURGE. n. f. [from surge, Latin.] A swelling sea; a wave rolling above the general surface of the water; billow; wave.
 The realm was left, like a ship in a storm, amidst all the raging surges, unruled and undirected of any. Spenser.
 The wind-thrall'd surge, with high and monstrous main,
 Seems to cast water on the burning bear,
 And quench the guards of the ever-fired pole:
 I never did like molestation view
 On the enchain'd flood. Shakespeare's Othello.
 He trod the water,
 Whose enmity he flung aside, and breast'd
 The surge most swollen that met him. Shakespeare's Tempest.
 It was formerly famous for the unfortunate loves of Hero and Leander, drowned in the uncompassionate surges. Sandys.
 The sulph'rous hail Shot after us in storm, o'erblown, hath laid
 The very surge, that from the precipice
 Of heav'n receiv'd us falling. Milton's Paradise Lost.
 He sweeps the skies, and clears the cloudy North:
 He flies aloft, and with impetuous roar
 Pursues the foaming surges to the shore.
 Thence, near Ilium's swelling flood,
 With dread beheld the rolling surges sweep
 In heaps his slaughter'd sons into the deep. Pope.
 To SURGE. v. n. [from surge, Latin.] To swell; to rise high.
 From midst of all the main the surges rose
 The surging waters like a mountain rise. Fairy Queen.
 He, all in rage, his sea-god fire befo'ght,
 Some curst vengeance on his son to cast;
 From surging gulfs two monsters straight were brought, F. 2.
 Up from the bottom turn'd by furious winds
 And surging waves, as mountains, to assault
 Heav'n's heights, and with the centre mix the pole. Milton.
 Not with indented wave,
 From on the ground, as fince; but on his rear,
 Circular base of rising folds, that tower'd Fold above fold, a surging maze. Milton's Parad. Lost.
Surging waves against a solid rock,
 Though all to divers dath'd, th' assault renew,
 Vain battery, and in froth or bubbles end. Milton.

SUR

SURGEON. n. f. [Corrupted by conversation from chirurgæon.]
 One who cures by manual operation; one whose duty is to act in external maladies by the direction of the physician.
 The wound was past the cure of a better surgeon than myself, so as I could but receive some few of her dying words. Sid.
 I meddle with no woman's matters; but withal, I am a sur- geon to old shoes. Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.
 He that hath wounded his neighbour, is tied to the expences of the surgeon, and other incidences. Yayor.
 Though most were sorely wounded, none were slain:
 The surgeons soon despoil'd them of their arms,
 And some with salves they cure. Dryden.
SURGERY. n. f. [from chirurgery.] The art of curing by manual operation.
 It would seem very evil surgery to cut off every unfound part of the body, which, being by other due means recovered, might afterwards do good service. Spenser.
 But strangely visited people,
 The mere despair of surgery, he cures. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
 They are often tar'd over with the surgery of our sheep, and would you have us kill tar? Shakespeare.
SURGEY. adj. [from surge.] Rising in billows.
 What cause hath led you to the Spartan court?
 Do publick or domestick cares constrain me? Pope.
 This toilsome voyage o'er the surge main?
SURILY. adv. [from surly.] In a surly manner.
SURLINESS. n. f. [from surly.] Gloomy moroseness; four anger.
 Thus pale they meet; their eyes with fury burn;
 None greets; for none the greeting will return;
 But in dumb *surly*ness, each arm'd with care,
 His foe profess, as brother of the war. Dryden.
SURLING. n. f. [from surly.] A four morose fellow. Not used.
 These four *surly*ings are to be commended to fleur Gaulard. Camden.
SURLY. adj. [from sur, four, Saxon.] Gloomily morose; rough; uncivil; four; silently angry.
 'Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groom,
 That take it on you at the first so roundly. Shakespeare.
 That surly spirit, melancholy,
 Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy thick;
 Which else runs tickling up and down the veins,
 Making that idiot laughter keep mens eyes,
 And strain their cheeks to idle merriment. Shakespeare's K. John.
 Against the Capitol I met a lion,
 Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
 Without annoying me. Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.
 Repuls'd by surly grooms, who wait before
 The sleeping tyrant's interdicted door. Dryden.
 What if among the courtly tribe
 You lost a place, and sav'd a bribe?
 And then in surly mood came here
 To fifteen hundred pounds a year,
 And fierce against the whigs harang'd?
 The zephyrs floating loose, the timely rains,
 Now soften'd into joy the surly storms. Thomson's Summer.
 To SURMISE. v. a. [from surmise, French.] To suspect; to imagine imperfectly; to imagine without certain knowledge.
 Man coveteth what exceedeth the reach of sense, yea somewhat above capacity of reason, somewhat divine and heavenly, which with hidden exultation it rather surmiseth than con-ceiveth; somewhat it seeketh, and what that is directly it knoweth not; yet very intensive desire thereof doth so incite it, that all other known delights and pleasures are laid aside, and they give place to the search of this but only suspected desire. Hooker.
 Of questions and strifes of words cometh envy, railings,
 and evil surmising. Tim. vi. 4.
Surmise not
 His presence to these narrow bounds confin'd. Milton.
 It waited nearer yet, and then the knew
 That what before the but surmis'd, was true. Dryden.
 This change was not wrought by altering the form or possition of the earth, as was surmised by a very learned man, but by dissolving it. Woodward.
SURMISE. n. f. [from surmise, French.] Imperfect notion; suspicion; imagination not supported by knowledge.
 To let go private surmises, whereby the thing itself is not made better or wariet, if just and allowable reasons might lead them to do as they did, then are these censures frustrate. Locke.
 They were by law of that proud tyrannet,
 Provok'd with wrath, and envy's false surmises.
 Condemned to that dungeon mercies, Shakespeare's F. 2.
 Where they should live in woe, and die in wretchedness, F. 2.
 Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart
 Will not permit my eyes once to behold
 The things, whereat it trembles by surmise. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
 My thought, whose murdering yet is but fanciful,
 Shakes to my single state of man, that function
 Is smother'd in surmise. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
 We double honour gain
 From his surmise prov'd false. Milton.
 No
